PREFACE

Grover Cleveland Cornett, my beloved husband and companion for fifty-seven years, gathered much of the material for this book, tracing his family back to William Cornett, a soldier in the Revolutionary War, and trying to tie in the connection of his family with King Canute I of England through the Cornetts of Grayson County, Virginia. Most of this information was in the form of old letters from several of Grover's relatives and from the carbon copies of his answers to those letters. His correspondence with Mrs. Mildred Watkins, Ancestral Hunter for the Shreveport Journal, was a great help, as was also her encouragement to me.

I have attempted to trace the descendants of each of the ten children of John Cornett II (1828-1904), grandson of William Cornett (1761-1836), to the present time, November 1, 1970. John Cornett II was my husband's grandfather. He is listed in J. D. Cornett's "Genealogy of William Cornett," and his marriage to Nancy Combs is noted there, but no further record is given. It is to be hoped that this addition to the record of the Cornetts will enable many of his descendants to locate themselves accurately within the family and perhaps to establish connections.

My basic reason for writing this book is that my husband started it and worked for many years gathering the material. He planned to have it published. It seemed to me that the least I could do to honor his memory was to complete the work he had started. During his retirement years, I have heard him say, "I'm living on borrowed time. I live one day at a time, and each day as though it might be my last."

I wish to express my thanks to Mr. Denzil O. Evans, who also has some connection with the Cornett family, for the use of his copy of "Pioneer Settlers of Grayson County, Virginia," and to the Hazard, Kentucky, Chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution for their permission to use excerpts from their "History of Perry County, Kentucky."

I am indebted to those interested relatives who sent me the information about their families and especially to those whose encouragement gave me confidence when the task seemed too large.

Mr. J. D. Cornett, of Daisy, Kentucky, had some correspondence with my husband, in which he gave his permission to use any part of his little book "Genealogy of William Cornett (1761-1836)." I am grateful for that permission.

I am grateful also to my son, Richard Orin Cornett, for his reading of the manuscript and his suggested changes.

The memory of my precious husband has kept me at the task until its completion. I hope that those descendants of the Cornetts who read this book will be pleased with it.

Chapter I

CANUTE

"Up to about the year 1871, the Cornett family of Grayson County, Virginia spelled their name Canute; in all their business transactions it was written Canute, and some of the older people still spell it and pronounce it that way. The family tradition is that they are descended from King Canute of England."[1]

Canute, known as "the Great," King of England, Denmark and Norway, the son of Sweyn Forkbeard, King of Denmark, was born in 995 A.D. In 1013, he sailed with his father for England and shared in the conquest of Wessex. After Sweyn's death, in February, 1014, and the return of King Ethelred of England, who had fled to Normandy, Canute was driven out of the country, only to return again in 1015 with a strong Danish fleet. Canute met with some resistance but continued on to Wessex and, in November 1016, he was elected King of all England. Under the rule of Canute "the Great" there grew up a great Anglo-Scandinavian kingdom that included parts of Sweden.

Though the reign of Canute was outwardly prosperous through a period of unusual order and security, the spirituality and learning of the nation decreased. The invasion of the Danes had fallen heavily on the church; priests were martyred and slaughtered, churches sacked and burned. The decline in national character injuriously affected the church.[2]

[2] Encycopedia Britannica, Vol. 4, p. 773-4, 1962.

"After his first harsh measures were over, Canute sought the friendship of both Church and people. He gave the country peace. He rebuked the flattering of courtiers by showing them that the in-rolling tide is no respecter of persons; he endeavored to rule justly, and his liking for the monks found expression in his song:

'Merrily sang the Monks of Ely,
As Canute the King was passing by.'"[3]

Canute seemed to have had more ideas of central government than any of the earlier Saxon kings. He held the kingdom together and, in 1028, was able to subdue the greater part of Norway. Canute's plan was to establish a great Northern Empire embracing Denmark, Sweden, Norway and England. In this large realm, he divided England into four districts; Wessex, Marcia, East Angelo and Northumbria, which, with their dependencies, embraced the entire country. For a time the arrangement worked well, but eventually discord sprang up among the rulers. Their individual ambitions and their efforts to obtain supreme authority imperiled the unity of the country.

Canute died at Shaftesbury on 12 November 1035, in his fortieth year, and was buried at Winchester. He was succeeded by his son, Canute II, in 1036, and shortly afterward the great kingdom was dissolved. England was lost to the Scandinavian power.

Chapter II

THE CANUTES OF GRAYSON COUNTY, VIRGINIA[1]

Among the descendents of Canute who were not driven out of England when his kingdom was dissolved were seven brothers who came to America in 1740.

William Canute Sr. (1777-1862), the son of James Canute, one of the seven brothers, was an early settler in Grayson County, Virginia. In the first and second generations, all the Canutes of Grayson County spelled and pronunced their names Canute. About the third generation, some of the young people decided to spell it Cornett and pronounce it accordingly, though most of them retained the spelling Canute in business transactions.

William Canute Sr. married Jennie Sutherland (1787-1869), a daughter of John Sutherland Sr., and his wife, Elizabeth Bryan. In the history of the Bryan family, written by the wife of William Jennings Bryan, she states, "The great grandfather of William Jennings Bryan had a brother, Francis Bryan, and a sister, Elizabeth Bryan, that moved west from Eastern Virginia, and the family has lost trace of them."

In the early settlement of Southwest Virginia, Francis Bryan and his sister, Elizabeth Bryan, came to Fort Chiswell and the Lead Mines; from there they crossed the Iron Mountain and settled on Elk Creek. Elizabeth Bryan married John Sutherland Sr., and brought up a family of sons and daughters. Francis Bryan married Phoebe Woodruff, and moved from Elk Creek to Ashe County, North Carolina.

[1] Most of the material in this chapter is taken from the book by B. F. Nuckolls, Pioneer Settlers of Grayson County, Virginia, Chapter VIII, "The Cornett Family." Some of the material is reworked, but most of it is essentially as given in the book cited.

John Sutherland's family were originally from Scotland.

William Canute Sr. and wife, Jennie Sutherland, had a large family. They all settled on Elk Creek in Grayson County, Virginia.

(1) Colonel Eli Canute, the first son of William Sr. and Jennie Canute, married Sena Hale, the daughter of Richard Hale and wife, Elizabeth Stone. Eli and Sena Canute had two sons; Captain William Cornett and Captain Wiley Winston Cornett. They also had six daughters; Matilda, Elizabeth, Amanda, Elvira, Theresa and Jennie.

Captain William Cornett, the first son of Eli and Sena Canute, married Linnie Mitchell, daughter of William M. Mitchell, and wife, Sofia P. Hale. They had four sons: William Swift, Clarke Hale, Benjamin Winton and Earl Garland. They also had six daughters: Maud, Forest, Linnie, Bertha, Pauline, Gay and Dawn.

Wiley Winston Cornett, the second son of Eli and Sena Canute, enlisted in the Army of the Confederacy in 1861, and later became Captain W. W. Cornett of Co. F., 4th Virginia Infantry, Regiment C.L.A. In 1884, he moved to Missouri in a covered wagon.

(2) Levi Cornett, the second son of William Canute Sr. and his wife, Jennie, married Olive Hale, daughter of Dudley Hale and wife, Mary Burroughs. They had seven sons.

(a) Francis Cornett, the first son of Olive and Levi Cornett, married Miss Austin of Elk Creek, Virginia. They had sons and daughters. His second marriage was to Jane Daniels of Elk Creek. They also had sons and daughters.

(b) George W. Cornett, the second son of Levi and Olive Cornett, married Miss Herbert and they had one son, Thomas. His second marriage was to Sarah Gentry, daughter of Colonel Allen Gentry and wife, Rebecca Reeves. Judge George W. Cornett was a lawyer, a judge of the county court, and represented Grayson County in the legislature. He was a useful and worthy citizen of the county for many years. He had a son and four daughters by his second wife. Munsey, the son, was a lawyer; married and had children. His first daughter, Myrtle, married Rev. Kelly Boyer, member of the Western North Carolina Conference. The second daughter married Frank Sanders, son of John L. Sanders, Chilhowie, Virginia. Another daughter married Professor Morgan Cheek, Principal of Elk Creek High School.

(c) William, the third son of Levi and Olive Cornett, married Callie Delph. They had one daughter, who married a Mr. Copenhaver, of Smyth County, Virginia. William's second marriage was to Fisher Asbury, of Wythe County. They had one son, Thomas, who married the daughter of Ellis Lundy and wife, Alice Hale.

(d) Zach. M., the fourth son of Levi and Olive Cornett, married Gazilda Cecil, of Pulaski County, Virginia and lived there. They had children.

(e) Miles Foy, the fifth son of Levi and Olive Cornett, died single.

(f) Lewis K., the sixth son of Levi and Olive Cornett, married Nannie Warrick. They had two children. He was representative to the Legislature of Virginia from Grayson County for the second time.

(g) Friel, the seventh son of Levi and Olive Cornett, lives at the old homestead on Elk Creek. He married Hester Ring. They had one son, Romulus Ring Cornett, and four daughters; Isabella who married Colonel William Mitchell; Nancy, who married Lewis Perkins; Elvira, who married

(4) Colonel Alexander Cornett, the fourth son of Jennie and William Canute Sr., married Jemima Rhudy. They had five sons: Friel N., James P., William J., Stephen H., and Eli C. They also had five daughters: Marta, Elizabeth, Theresa, Charlotte, and Nancy.

William Canute Sr. and his wife, Jennie had three daughters: Charlotte D., who married William Rhudy, and had a family of sons and daughters; Lucy H., who married Andrew Porter. They lived on Elk Creek and had sons and daughters. Margaret, the third daughter, married Rev. Abraham Elliott, a local Methodist preacher. They settled on Meadow Creek and afterward moved to the Cornett mills on Elk Creek. From there they moved to Independence, Virginia where they kept the Hotel Elliot in operation. They brought up a family of sons and daughters, and all of them settled in and around the town of Independence. Their youngest daughter, Margaret, married William Wright who was editor of the "Journal," the Independence newspaper, for more than forty years.

William Canute Sr. was an energetic, enterprising citizen, and he trained his family to be useful and industrious. William Canute Sr. built a mill for grinding grain, a sawmill, and a carding machine for carding wool. These mills were built in the early days on the banks of Elk Creek, and were used by the settlers for many miles around.

Chapter III

WILLIAM CORNETT (1761-1836)

William Cornett, Revolutionary War soldier, was the son of John Canute, one of the seven brothers who came from England in 1740 and settled in America. John Canute, who changed his name to John Cornett, settled in the colony of Virginia.

William Cornett was born in Henrico County, Virginia, in 1761. While a resident of Buckingham County, Va. in 1779, he enlisted in the Revolutionary War and served in Captain Anthony Winston's Company, in the Regiment commanded by Colonel Skipps. He continued in the service until his term of six months expired when he was honorably discharged at Maubin Hills by Captain Winston in 1780.

In 1780, William re-enlisted in Buckingham County, Virginia, and served under Captain Saunders, Major Garnaway and Colonel Patterson. From Buckingham, they marched over to the eastern shore of the country. He served until his term expired, and he was honorably discharged at White Oak Springs, Little York, shortly before Lord Cornwallis surrendered the English Forces at Yorktown on 19 October 1781.[1]

After the War of the Revolution, William Cornett returned to Virginia and married Rhoda Gilliam. They were married in Washington County 4 May 1790 by John Frost. To them were born four children: John, Arch, Lucy and Elisabeth.

John Cornett married Rachael Smith and settled on Carr's Fork in Kentucky.

[1] Copy of William Cornett's application for an army pension

Arch Cornett married Judy McDaniel and settled on Clover Fork of Big Leatherwood River in Kentucky.

Lucy Cornett married Woolery Eversole, the youngest son of Jacob Eversole.

Elisabeth Cornett married William Campbell. They had twelve children.

After the death of his first wife, Rhoda, William Cornett married Mary Everage in April, 1796. Mary was a young widow with two little girls, Sally and Polly. Shortly after they were married, William went with Gideon Ison on a hunting and exploring expedition in Kentucky.

KENTUCKY

William Cornett made his first visit to Kentucky with his friend, George Gideon Ison, on a hunting and exploring trip. Game was scarce in Virginia and they had heard that bear, deer and other game were plentiful in Kentucky. They had also heard of the land that had been set aside there by the United States Government for soldiers of the Revolution to settle and make homes.[2]

As they traveled with their horses loaded with equipment for camping as well as with ammunition, they kept a sharp look out for Indians. They became even more apprehensive as they crossed over the Big Black Mountains into Kentucky.

After about three days travel they came to the mouth of Beech Fork in Big Leatherwood, Perry County, Kentucky. There they discovered several acres of level country with the finest timber they had ever seen. They also saw signs of a plentiful supply of game.

While cooking venison for their supper they talked of the beautiful country, the fine homes that could be built with logs from the tall, straight trees, and discussed the advisability of bringing their families to live in Kentucky.

[2] J. D. Cornett, Genealogy of William Cornett, 1761-1836.

Early the next morning they arose enthused over their good prospects, and started out to make an extended hunt for deer and bear; one going up the creek and the other down in order to explore as much as possible in one day. Within a few hours Gideon Ison came upon a smouldering fire. It was soon obvious to him that Indians had camped the night before. He hurried back to the camp with visions of being chased and scalped running through his mind. He intended to get on his horse and go home, leaving all his camping gear.

As he got on his horse he began to worry about the Indians finding William. He got off his horse and paced around the camp as he worried and waited. When he told William about the fire, William laughed. "Damned if I didn't see one today," he said, "he was worse scared than I was, and running the other way fast."

They prepared and ate supper very quietly without making a fire, then packed their camping gear for an early start the next morning. The thought that the Indians might attack them in the night was so impressed on their minds that they did not try to sleep but sat quietly by their packs all night. When the first gleam of light showed in the eastern sky, they mounted their horses and were immediately on their way back to their Virginia homes.

Not many months after their return to Virginia, both men loaded all their worldly possessions into wagons and moved their families to Kentucky; Gideon Ison to settle on Line Fork in Letcher County, and William Cornett to settle at the mouth of Bull Creek in Perry County.

William Cornett filed on a claim allotted to him by the government, and built a comfortable log house for his family of two boys and four girls. They all worked at clearing the land and planting crops. New rooms were added to the log house as needed for their growing family.

To William Cornett and Mary Everage were born seven children.

Robert Bustard, born in 1798, married Louise Combs and settled at the mouth of Buffalo Creek four miles above Hazard, Kentucky.

Roger, born 6 January 1805, died 27 September 1885. Married Polly Lewis.

Nancy, dates not given, married Samuel Combs, son of "Danger" Nick Combs.

Rachel, born 10 February 1807, died 15 April 1887, married John A. Caudill.

Samuel, born 4 March 1809, died 24 November 1860, married Polly Adams.

Nathaniel Wolery, born 2 April 1811, died 12 January 1889, married Lydia Caudill.

Joseph E., born 28 April 1814, died 30 May 1891, married Sally Brown. He helped to lay out the town of Whitesburg and later became the County Judge.

Mary Everage had two little girls when she married William Cornett. Sally Everage married Thomas McDaniel. Polly Everage married Robert S. Brashear and settled at the mouth of Little Leatherwood. He owned the farm known as the Salt Works Farm, near the mouth of the river. To them were born the following children: Joe, Ray, Thomas, William, Marinda, Eliza, Martha, Mariah, Mary and Peggy. Thomas and his mother, Polly Everage Brashear, were buried in the Cornett Graveyard near the graves of William Cornett and Mary.

In a few years the family of six children had increased to thirteen, and the older ones were grown and married. Most of them settled on farmland in Perry County or surrounding counties and had families of their own.

On 12 August 1833, William Cornett made an application to the government of the United States, through the county court of Perry County, Kentucky, for a pension that had been granted by an Act of Congress on June 7, 1832, for soldiers who had served in the War of the Revolution. He stated that he was 71 years old at that time and gave his complete war record with dates of each of his two enlistments, the names of officers under whom he served, and dates and places of his honorable discharges. He had affidavits sworn to by two people that he was entitled to the pension. He was granted a pension of $40 a year for the rest of his life.

William Cornett died 26 November 1836. Mary Cornett made an application for a widow's pension 28 September 1852, stating that she had been a widow for sixteen years. She died not long after the application was filed.[3]

William and Mary Cornett are buried in the Cornett Cemetery near the site of their old home about a mile from Cornettsville, originally called Salt Creek from the salt wells at the mouth of Leatherwood. Cornettsville is a small railroad station on the North Fork of the Kentucky River eighteen miles south of Hazard, Kentucky. It has a post office with two star-routes operated by horse-back, a depot, two stores and about twenty houses. The name was changed because all of the residents were descendants of William Cornett.

William Cornett has more than a hundred grandchildren, a large number of great-grandchildren, and hundreds of descendants in Eastern Kentucky.

William Cornett had a brother, Samuel Cornett, born 7 May 1759, died 12 March 1849. He married Polly Davidson and settled on Line Fork in Letcher County, Kentucky. To them were born the following children: Clark, William, James, Samuel, Hiram, Joe, Katie and Linda.

Chapter V

RELIGIOUS BACKGROUNDS OF THE CORNETTS

The early settlers of what was later known as Perry County, Kentucky, were very devout and deeply consecrated. They worshiped in homes, in brush arbors and in open spaces until church buildings could be erected. In some communities, the church, commonly called the "Meeting House," was built first and also served as a school house. Often the preacher was the school teacher as well. These churches were made of logs hewn from the magnificant, virgin timber on the farms nearby. The labor was contributed by the men and women of the community, so very little expense was involved.

In 1789, Jacob Eversole, a Baptist minister, settled in what was later Perry County. It is said that he preached in the community for many years. He lived to be 100 years old. Richard Smith, a Baptist minister, came from Virginia in 1790. He preached in Perry County and in what is now known at Breathitt County.

In 1807, Electious Thompson, a Baptist minister, came to Perry County from North Carolina and preached among these settlers. In 1808 he settled near the mouth of Rockhouse, now located in Letcher County. In 1809 he was joined by Elder William Salisbury of Floyd County and later by Simeon Justice another minister. These three constituted the Presbytery that organized the first church. They traveled by foot, horseback or ox cart through almost unbroken wilderness, and covered hundreds of miles attending associations, funerals and Church appointments. They were called Elders.

THE INDIAN BOTTOM CHURCH

The first church established in what was later called Perry County was the Indian Bottom Church. With Electious Thompson, William Salisbury and Simeon Justice acting as Presbytery, a group of twenty Baptists met, in 1810, in the home of Isaac Whitaker. This was about two miles up the Kentucky River from where Blackey was located, near the old Indian camping place known as Indian Bottom. These twenty charter members brought letters from other churches of like faith and order in the colonies of Virginia and North Carolina. Electious Thompson was chosen pastor and Isaac Whitaker clerk. In 1811 this church was received into the Washington Association which was composed of churches in the southwestern part of Virginia. The church grew and prospered through the years and established other churches in the area.

CARR'S FORK CHURCH

Carr's Fork Church was established in 1827 by the Indian Bottom Church with 13 charter members; among them were John Cornett, the second son of William Cornett, and his wife Rachel Smith. Their son John Cornett II and his wife, Nancy Combs, were members some years later.

BIG LEATHERWOOD CHURCH

On the second Saturday in July, 1871, a group of members from the Indian Bottom Church met under a large woodshed at the home of Anderson and Susanah Cornett and organized the Big Leatherwood Church. Elders John A. Caudill, Wiley Morris, Samuel Combs and James Dixon formed the Presbytery. The Charter members were Rhoda Pratt, Archibald Cornett, son of John Cornett and brother of the second John Cornett, Polly Brashear, Cindy Caudill, Eli Callihan, William R. Stamper, Clemat Shepherd, Susanah Cornett, Mary Caudill, William McIntire, Dianah McIntire, Elizabeth Brashear, Robert S. Brashear, Sally Brashear, Lou Anna Combs, Mary Ann Brashear, John D. Combs, Elizabeth Hall, John H. Hall, Mary Fields, Charles L. Cornett and James Stevens.

Hiram Pratt and William Brashear were ordained as deacons and Charles Lewis Cornett, father of J. D. Cornett, was elected clerk. James Dixon was called as pastor. The church was admitted to the New Salem Association which was organized in 1825.

The site for the church building was donated by Anderson and Susanah Cornett and located in the lower end of a field of their farm. The first church building, which also served as school, was a large one-room structure of logs with an immense open fireplace. The logs were donated by different members, and the entire membership contributed the labor.

On May 5, 1894, a site below the old road near the mouth of Big Leatherwood, was purchased from Eli and Jane Cornett and a new frame structure was erected. With the coming of the railroad it was moved to its later site at the mouth of Little Leatherwood adjoining Denver Miniard's farm, and under the leadership of the pastor, James Pratt, a new church building was erected. Ministers who have come out of this church are Eli Pratt, Bee Ison, B. Cornett, Granville Riddle, L. C. Riddle, G. M. Caudill, J. W. Pratt, Dixie Ison.

The above information was taken from the original record in the minutes of the church.

The following is an excerpt taken from a photostatic copy of one of the letters from James Dickson, a member of the Big Leatherwood Church, which were found in the Bible of John Cornett, who moved to Arkansas in 1870.

"Indian Bottom, Letcher County, Ky.
June 26, 1887

Mr. John Cornitt (sic), dear Brother

I will inform you that I am in receipt of your letter of May 24th. Was truly glad to hear from you and that you were well. Was thankful to the God of all Grace that you had visited my Son. Hope you will do so again and that you will if you feel like it converse with him upon the glorious doctrine of the gospel of the Son of God, Salvation by grace through and by the merits of the Blood of Christ as a lamb, slain from before the foundation of the world . . .

You say if it was not asking too much you want me to write on church government or discipline. You have not asked too much, brother John, if I could do it but most assuredly I feel unworthy in and of myself to do so but desiring to trust in the rewarding power of God who resurrected Christ from the dead and set him on high to be both a prince and a Savior, him having the preemanence (sic) over all principalities and powers to be the great invisible head of the church the pillar and ground of the truth . . .

As a starting point we will notice the scripture which moved up in my mind since I began to write that there should be no schism in the body but that the members should have the same care for another—I Cor. 12 Ch. 25 verse—here we see the great appostle (sic) was portraying uppon (sic) the mind of the Corinthian church the unity of the church as a body and shows under a metaphor of a natural body made up of members all animated by the flow and warmth of the same blood . . .

This divine law of the Spirit is practiced by the Regular Baptist of all ages and should be according to the gospel for a dicipline (sic) that deviates from the orthadox (sic) principal of the gospel is human and not the dicipline (sic) of the Christ which is divine . . .

The members should have the same love for another bearing one anothers burdens fulfilling the law of Christ in obedience and humility. The Church of Christ is a unit and is spoken of by the wise man as a virtuous woman having the law of kindness in her tongue and honors her husband in the gates, holding fast the doctrine of Salvation by grace she does so freely without money or price . . . They are taught to love one another not in word only but in Spirit and truth. This divine law is practiced by the Regular Baptists of all ages. . . .

We have no right to receive the Baptism of an illegal administrator nor will the law of Zion suffer us to commune with the inscriptural denominations and Modern institutions of Men. The dicipline (sic) will not suffer us to fellowship a heretic it causes divisions instead of teaching the tender babes of Jesus to have the same care one for another. It will not suffer us to hold in fellowship drunkenness adultery nor none of those abominations—Amen—and may the Lord bless you is the prare (sic) of your unworthy Brother James Dickson."

Chapter VI

JOHN CORNETT II (1828-1904)

John Cornett, the grandson of William Cornett, Revolutionary War soldier, was born near Hazard, in Perry County, Kentucky, on 28 January 1828. His parents were John Cornett, the second son of William Cornett, and his wife, Rachael Smith.

John Cornett II married Nancy Combs in 1852. She was born in that same area on 2 February 1834. They lived on a farm near what later became Cornettsville, about eighteen miles south of Hazard. Cornettsville has a post office, two stores and about twenty houses. The name was chosen by John B. Cornett, the first postmaster and storekeeper because at that time all the residents were descendants of William Cornett. One mile from this little village is the Cornett Cemetery which contains some of the oldest graves in Perry County, among them those of William Cornett and his second wife, Mary Eversole.

To John Cornett II and his wife, Nancy Combs, were born ten children, eight of them on their farm where they lived until 1871, when they moved to Dutton, Arkansas.

Archibald, born 27 August 1853,

John III, born 3 May 1855,

Elijah, born 7 November 1856,

Judy, born 19 June 1859, died 8 June 1877, in Dutton, Arkansas,

Laurainie, born 2 October 1861,

Adaline, born 15 August 1864,

Robert E. Lee, born 23 August 1865,

Minerva, born 24 May 1871,

Polly Ann, born in 1875 at Dutton, Arkansas in Madison County, died in 1877.

Emma, born 12 May 1877, at Dutton, Arkansas.[1]

When John Cornett II and Nancy Combs were married, they built a log house with an attic and a lean-to on the side. It had a big fireplace for cooking and heating as all the homes in the neighborhood had. They worked hard and were devout members of the Primitive Baptist Church. Life was good.

Then the War Between the States developed and John enlisted in the Army of the Confederacy, 7 September 1861, to serve three years under Captain George Bragg. He was described as being thirty-four years old, five-feet-eleven inches high, with dark complexion, gray eyes, dark hair and, by occupation, a farmer.

Nancy Cornett and her five little children suffered many hardships and deprivations during the time John was in the army and for several months following his return, while he was recovering from serious illness.

John served in the Army of the Confederacy until 5 June 1863, when he received an honorable discharge because of Pleurisy Pulmanitis, caused by Chronic Bronchitis, at Camp Hope. The discharge was signed by Col. B. E. Caudill, Commander of the Tenth Regiment of Kentucky Volunteers.[2]

In the Headquarters U. S. Forces, 1st Division, Department of Kentucky, at Louisa, Kentucky, John Cornett took the Oath of Allegiance to the Government of the United States, 5 May 1865, A.D. before—Williams, Lieut. Provost Marshall.[3]

John Cornett was sick a long time after the war but his wife was a hardworking woman and she had learned to manage. The children had learned to help. The place was a shambles, as were all the farms in the area which had been overrun by the Union Army. During the war, Hazard suffered from guerrilla warfare raids from wandering bands of soldiers. Some of the families were slaveholders and there was the same division in families and bitterness between neighbors that was found throughout the borderline states of the south.

Surrounding farms became neglected, the roads and paths were overgrown with weeds. Feuds developed as a result of the bushwhackers' raids and grievances over livestock driven off or being destroyed, especially when the marauders were recognized by neighbors.

John Cornett grew so tired of the continuous bushwacking and feuding among relatives and neighbors that, in 1870, when he heard of land for settlement in the Ozark mountains, he began to make plans to move. In 1871, he gathered up all his possessions and moved his family of eight children in wagons drawn by oxen to Arkansas. It was a slow and tortuous journey of more than 300 miles across Kentucky to northwestern Arkansas. The trip necessitated several weeks of camping out nights.

At Huntsville, the county seat of Madison County, John filed on a claim of one quarter section of land containing one hundred and sixty acres which was granted under the Act of Congress approved the 20th of May, 1862 "To secure Homesteads to Actual Settlers on the Public Domain" and the acts supplemental thereto. (Quoted from Deed 4-404 which was found in John Cornett's Bible.)

With the assistance of his teenage sons, John built a good log house of two rooms with an attic and a lean-to which stood for many years. He added more rooms in later years. The fine, straight timber on the farm furnished the logs for the house and barn as well as for the wide fireplaces in every room.

Just above the house is the great watershed of the Ozarks with its elevation of more than 2500 feet, which is at the headwaters of White River, flowing toward the north along the western part of the farm. The King River, starting in springs along the east, flows into the White River miles away in Missouri. South of the farm about ten miles is the Mulberry River which flows southwest and empties into the Arkansas River in the western part of the state. The White River ultimately reaches the Mississippi a few miles above where the Arkansas empties into the Mississippi.

The farm was located about three miles from the post office at Dutton, which in the early days had only a school house, a Primitive Baptist Church and a general store. Before long John Cornett put in a general store, and his sons worked in the store as well as on the farm. There was plenty of work for all.

The Ozark country is picturesque with its tall timber and many waterfalls. The trees are of many species, including some that are unusual: American Elm, Shagbark Hickory, Chinkapin, White and Blue Ash, Blackwood, Magnolia, Blackgum, Pawpaw, Buckthorn and several kinds of Oak. A profusion of young trees are growing in the open spaces ready to replace those cut down. Every farm has a plentiful supply of timber.

The woods are full of wild flowers all summer long and on into winter. Ferns grow even in winter. In the deep, narrow valleys are white and purple phlox, Jacob's Ladder, Mepatica and wild Hydrangea. A rare and dainty orchid, the Pogonia, is sometimes found there. Higher up on the bluffs are Columbine, Azaleas, Jack-in-the Pulpit, Dutchman's Breeches, Violets and many kinds of ferns.

The fields have to be cleared of stumps and underbrush for crops to be planted and it is a constant struggle to keep the underbrush from growing back in the edges of the fields. It takes a lot of planning and hard work to get the land ready, but the soil is very rich, water is abundant, and everything grows.

Hogs run wild in the woods until the autumn; each one with the mark of its owner in the ear. In the late fall they are rounded up and penned and fed out to get them ready for butchering. By cold weather these razor-back hogs are fat enough to make very good meat. Neighbors help each other with the butchering. The meat is cooled and put into the smokehouse to be cured and smoked with a slow fire of hickory wood.

After the first frosts the woods are full of black walnuts, hickory nuts, hazel-nuts, all free for the gathering—plenty for the children as well as for the squirrels. They know just where to find the nuts because they have found them during the summer when they were foraging for huckleberries and strawberries.

Darkness falls early in the mountains in the winter time and everyone must go to bed early in order to save the candles and to get up early to walk to school in the morning. The The older boys work in the sawmill several miles away, and they must walk to work.

Two more children were born to John and Nancy Cornett after they moved to Arkansas: Polly, born in 1875, who died when she was two years old, and Emma, born 12 May 1877. That same year their oldest daughter, Judy, died on 8 June at the age of eighteen.

As each of John Cornett's sons reached the age of twenty-one, he filed on a claim and built a log cabin in Madison County. Some of the daughters were married and all lived in the same neighborhood. Then one by one, as times changed, some of them moved away.

John Cornett was a hale and hearty old man, and though he was bothered some by his bronchial cough, he was active to his last day. His grandchildren loved to tell about his going out in the woods to find a bee tree. And he always managed to find one.

On 16 February 1904, when he was 76 years old, he set out to find a bee tree. He was so late getting back that Nancy went to look for him. She found him a half mile from home sitting on a stump near a bee tree. He had been dead for several hours. They buried him in the cemetery at Dutton, near the little Primitive Baptist Church he loved. He was a devout Christian and attended that church regularly. Many other members of his family are buried in that cemetery.

Nancy Combs Cornett moved into a little house in Dutton and, with her youngest daughter, Emma, to take care of her, lived there the rest of her life. During her later years, she became totally blind and couldn't get around very well but her health was fairly good. Nancy died in the middle 1920's. Pictures of her taken in 1914 and in 1920 are at the end of this chapter.

Elijah, one of her sons, moved into the big log house on the farm. He reared a large family.

ARCHIBALD CORNETT

Archibald Cornett, the first son of John Cornett II and Nancy Combs, was born 27 August 1853 in Perry County, Ky. He was about 18 years old when he moved with his family to Dutton, Arkansas. When he was 21 years old, he filed on a claim in Madison County, Arkansas, a few miles from his parents' home. He and Mary Grigsby were soon married and moved into the log house he had built. Mary was the daughter of Edward Grigsby. She had moved from Perry County, Kentucky to Arkansas with her parents.

To Archibald and Mary Cornett six children were born—all at Dutton, Arkansas. Alice Belle, born 17 August 1776; Nancy Ann, born 13 July 1881; Dora, born 8 March 1885; Oscar Rosso, born 10 September 1887; Robert Owen, born 10 December 1889; John, born in 1891, and died in childhood.

Archibald Cornett died not long after the death of their little son, Johnny, and was buried in the Dutton Cemetery near the Primitive Baptist Church.

In 1896, Mary Cornett married Charles Wesley Vandagriff, a widower with two sons, Earnest and Cecil, and a daughter. The daughter, Stella Belle Vandagriff, married John Booth Shipley 11 September 1898, at Flowery. Arkansas and soon moved away. Alice Belle Cornett, the first child of Archibald and Mary Cornett, married Theophilus Davis 2 November 1890 at Dutton, Ark. He was born 22 January 1871 in Madison County, Ark., the son of John Davis and Barbara Ritchie. The family moved to Davenport, Okla. in the early 1930's during the depression and Alice operated a restaurant for several years. Theophilus died 7 June 1953 and was buried at McAlester, Okla. Alice moved to Tulsa, Okla. where she died 11 March 1963 and was taken to McAlester for burial.

Myrtle Barbara, the first child of Theophilus and Alice Belle Davis, married Robert Lee (Pete) Meeks 3 November 1910 at Hartshorne, Okla. He was born 3 September 1885 at Tracy City, Tenn. They had eight children: the first five at Hartshorne, Okla. in Pittsburg County. Alfred Lee, born 7

Dora the third child of Archibald and Mary Cornett, married George Walter Parker 29 June 1905 at Dutton Arkansas. He was born 21 October 1879 at Aurora, Arkansas, the son of Lewis Parker and Rachael Pratlow Albright. They had one daughter, Mary Thelma, born 7 July 1906 at Fayetteville, Arkansas.

George Parker entered the nursery business as a young man, starting his first nursery in 1905, and building one of the largest nurseries in the southwest. In the years 1908 to 1927, he owned and operated Parker Bros Nursery Co., Fayetteville, Arkansas and Arkansas Seed & Nursery Co., Kansas City, Mo. He specialized in landscape work. During the depression of the thirties, he moved to Shawnee, Oklahoma and made an attempt to start a nursery there. When that failed, he moved to Tecumseh, Okla. where he was associated with his brother, Jim Parker, of the Parker Nursery and Orchard Co. for a time. In more recent years, he lived at Claremore, Okla., where he established the Claremore Nurseries, operating them until his death . . . George Parker died 23 May 1942 at the Franklin Hospital, Claremore, Oklahoma.

Dora continued to live in the big house which was situated on ten acres of land in Claremore. As the place increased in value, Dora converted the house into apartments and managed the place until her death 26 January 1957.

Thelma, the daughter of George and Dora Parker, graduated from high school in Fayetteville and attended one year at Lindenwood College in St. Charles, Mo. She then transferred to the University of Arkansas and was graduated in 1929 with a B.S. degree in High School Education. Her social sorority was Pi Beta Phi.

After teaching three years in the Junior High School at Ft. Smith, Arkansas, Thelma married Thornton Alexander 4 June 1932 at Fayetteville, Ark. He is the son of Olen Anderson Alexander and Mary Frances Thornton and was born 17 December 1904 at Mena, Arkansas.

Thelma continued to teach at Ft. Smith until 1935 when she and Thornton moved to El Dorado, Arkansas, where Thornton was manager of the Southwestern Bell Telephone Company. Their daughter, Sharon, was born 9 April 1940 at El Dorado, Arkansas. Thelma returned to teaching in the elementary school of El Dorado in 1954. She plans to retire in 1971. Thornton retired as manager of the Bell Telephone Co. in 1968. They have recently returned from a two month's tour of Europe and a visit with their daughter and her family in England.

Sharon, the daughter of Thelma and Thornton Alexander, attended El Dorado High School and Lindenwood College, and graduated from the University of Arkansas with Bachelor of Art and Bachelor of Music degrees. At the University, she was a member of Pi Beta Phi sorority and, in 1961-62, president of Sigma Alpha Iota honorary music fraternity. She taught English for the year 1963-64 in the Berlitz School of Languages and the Cambridge Language Center in Paris, France, and studied music with Jules Gentil. Upon the recommendation of M. Gentil, she was nominated by the Educational Ministry as an assistant professor of English in the Jules Terry Lycee in Paris for the school year, 1964-65.

Sharon Alexander married Stephen Wilson 13 June 1964 at Malvern, England. He is the son of Norman and Jean Wilson, and was born 21 May 1941 at Stow, England. On account of her marriage, Sharon could not accept the earlier appointment. She taught piano at the Perse School for Girls at Cambridge while Stephen continued to work on his Ph.D. degree.

Two daughters were born to Stephen and Sharon Wilson; Sophia Catherine, born 12 April 1965 at Cambridge, England, and Charlotte Rebecca, born 6 December 1967 at Norwich, England.

Stephen Wilson received his preparatory training at Rugby and was an honors graduate of Cambridge University, receiving his Ph.D. degree in Modern French Political Thought in 1967. He taught one year at the University of Edinburgh, and is presently teaching at the University of East Anglia in Norwich, England, where they are making their home. He has been commissioned by Pengrin Publishing Company to write a book on French Social History which he hopes to have ready for the publisher in 1971.

Oscar Rosso, the fourth child of Archibald and Mary Cornett, was about five years old when his father died. He helped his mother on the farm until he was grown and then he taught country schools in winter.

In August 1913, Oscar married Golda Lynch Barber, born 2 May 1892 at Bristol, Ark. She is the daughter of Edward Clark Barber and Sarah Adeline Adams. The Barber family still live in the Dutton, St. Paul, Pettigrew community in Madison County.

The first few years after they were married, they taught in Pettigrew, Oscar as Principal, Golda as assistant. Their son, Jack Gleason, was born 9 July 1915 at Pettigrew. Oscar bought an interest in the Eli Sizemore grocery store and, when Mr. Sizemore died about 1919, Oscar bought out his interests and continued to manage the store until the family moved to Fayetteville, Ark. in 1925. In Fayetteville, he bought and operated a grocery-filling station combination which he operated until 1927 when, together with Golda's brother, Wood Barber, he bought and managed the Ford Agency at Bentonville, Arkansas.

The depression forced the Ford Agency into bankruptcy and Oscar worked for the Fayetteville Merchantile Company for three or four years. As the depression lifted he secured financial backing and opened self-service groceries (three in all) in Ft. Smith. Oscar and Golda moved to Ft. Smith, Ark. about 1936, where they remained until Oscar's death 17 January 1945. He was laid to rest in that beautiful cemetery at Ft. Smith.

After settling the estate, Golda sold their home and moved back to Fayetteville. She kept her own apartment for several years, then moved into a hotel where she lives at the present time. Since Jack and his family live in Neosho, Missouri, they are only 75 miles away and she sees them often.

Jack Gleason Cornett, the son of Oscar and Golda Cornett, married Ruth Andrews 15 September 1940 at Forest City, Ark. She is the daughter of Chesley Andrews and Ella B. Turrentine, and was born 7 October 1919 at Huttigem, Ark. Jack and Ruth have five children: Carole Alison, born 25 July 1943 at Ft. Meade, South Dakota; Corliss Ruth, 20

March 1946 at Ft. Leavenworth, Kansas; Jack G. Jr., born 9 November 1947 at Forrest City, Ark.; Craig Andrew, born 9 June 1949 at Sapporo, Japan; and Jill Frances, born 17 March 1959 at Arlington, Va.

Jack Cornett was graduated from the University of Arkansas and commissioned as second lieutenant of infantry through the Reserve Officer Training Corps program in 1937. He began his active service in 1940, serving first as a company officer with the 38th Infantry, 2nd Infantry Division at Ft. Sam Houston; then with the 503rd Parachute Infantry Battalion at Fort Benning.

During World War II, Jack Cornett served in various Airborne assignments, including tours as Airborne Officer with the 1st Army Group in England and with the 12th Army Group in France. In the period between World War II and the Korean War, he served as: a Senior Instructor at the Command and General Staff College, a battalion commander and GI, 11th Airborne Division in Japan; and as the Commander, 505th Airborne Infantry Regiment, 82nd Airborne Division at Fort Bragg. During the Korean War, Jack served in combat as Executive Officer of the 5th Regimental Combat Team. He returned from Korea in 1953 to attend the Army War College. Upon graduation, he was assigned to the Pentagon for duty with the Army General Staff and raised to the rank of Colonel.

From 1959 to 1961, Colonel Cornett was the Military Liaison Officer to the British Army in Singapore. He was assigned to the Infantry School, Fort Benning, Georgia, from 1961 to 1964, and served as Deputy Assistant Commandant Chief of Academic Staff. From 1964 through mid-1966, was the DEPUTY CHIEF, JUMAG THAILAND, with residence and offices in Bangkok. This tour ended in June 1966 with his return to the United States and assignment to Fort Leavenworth, Kansas. There he was the Deputy Commander of the Combat Developments Command Institute of Combined Arms and Support.

Colonel Jack Gleason Cornett retired as Regular Army

Colonel in June 1967 after 30 years service. During most of the years of various assignments, his family accompanied him. Among his decorations and awards are the Distinguished Service Medal, the Bronze Star Medal, the Purple Heart, Commendation Ribbons/OLC, Combat Infantryman Badge with Star, and the Master Parachutist Badge.

After he retired, Colonel Cornett moved to Neosho, Mo. and bought a home, where they enjoy the quiet atmosphere and pleasant surroundings of a small town. Ruth has always been busy with her family and home. Now, with the older children grown and only an eleven-year-old girl at home, she finds time for many activities. Ruth is a college graduate with a major in English. They are all active members of the Baptist Church.

Colonel Cornett is active in community and civic affairs and enjoys golf, hunting, running and other outdoor sports. But soon after retirement, he became interested in business. From 1 July 1967 to July 1968, he was Assistant to the President (for management) of Neosho Nurseries Company. From 15 July 1968 to 1970, he worked for Continental Aviation and Engineering, a Teledyne Company which makes and overhauls jet turbine engines for military, and has 420 employees. He was first Supervisor, then Chief of Production Control, then Program Administrator.

In September 1970, Colonel Cornett began a new career. He is presently teaching history, geography and political science in the secondary school at Neosho, Mo.

Carole Alison, the first child of Jack and Ruth Cornett, married James O. Graham in 1967 at Grove, Oklahoma. He is the son of Harley and Arora Graham, born 6 December 1942 at Grove, Okla. Carole is a Registered Nurse and James is an accountant for a petroleum company. They live in Tulsa, Oklahoma where they have a lovely home. Carole and James have one son, Sean Graham, born 3 May 1970 at Tulsa, Oklahoma.

Corliss Ruth, the second child of Jack and Ruth Cornett, married James Fred Rice in 1965 at Fayetteville, Arkansas.

He is the son of Clarence and Viola Rice and was born 30 September 1945 at Fayetteville, Ark. They have one son, James Henderson Rice, born 3 March 1966 at Fayetteville, Arkansas.

James and Corliss are both working, and he is also attending college at Long Beach, California. They are presently making their home in Santa Ana, California.

Jack Gleason Cornett, the third child of Jack and Ruth Cornett, graduated from the University of Arkansas and received his Commission as First Lieutenant in June 1969. He married Rebecca Temple 28 August 1947 at Little Rock, Arkansas. Jack and Rebecca were classmates and graduated with the same class.

Lieutenant Jack Cornett, Jr. is presently stationed in Germany. His wife is with him and they are expecting their first child in the autumn of 1970.

Craig Andrew, the fourth child of Jack and Ruth Cornett, expects to graduate with a Bachelor of Science degree in Business Education from the University of Arkansas in June 1971. He plans to migrate to Australia after his graduation. Since he was born in Japan, and has lived in several foreign countries, the plan doesn't seem strange to his family. All the children of Colonel Cornett feel very much at home overseas.

Robert Owen Cornett, the fifth child of Archibald and Mary Cornett, was born 10 December 1889 at Dutton, Ark., and in 1892 his father died. His education was the same as that of most boys growing up in rural America at the turn of the century. He, and his brother, Oscar, attended school until they were old enough to be useful on their mother's farm. Both boys left the farm as soon as possible. Oscar chose to teach school and Bob left to go to Fayetteville, Ark. where his sister, Dora, and her husband, George Parker, lived.

The Parker Bros. Nursery was large and prosperous and George took Bob into the business, training him as a nurseryman and landscape gardener. Bob learned quickly and was soon supervising a group of men. He traveled some as a sales representative for Parker Bros. but his first interest was landscape design.

Bob was nineteen when he left Dutton but he came back often to visit and, during this time, Florence Miller was growing up. Bob and Florence were married 19 January 1916 at Dutton, Ark. She was the daughter of Columbus Miller and Susan Smith and the sister of J. Smith Miller who was married to Bob's Aunt Minerva.

Though Florence had attended Bird College in Huntsville, Ark., her real education came with the rearing of a family and her unending interest in the world around her. Bob and Florence had four children: Margie, born 2 February 1917 at Dutton and died 2 April 1917; Billy, born 16 August 1919 at Greenland, Arkansas; Mary Susan, born 9 December 1921 at Greenland, Arkansas and Robert Owen Jr., born 22 June 1923 at Fayetteville, Arkansas.

Since Bob was married and had children, he was not taken into the Army during World War I. He would probably have lived his entire life in Arkansas, content with his work, life-long friends and family, but the depression struck very hard in that part of Arkansas . . . In the thirties, he left his family and went to California to find work. California has been 'home' every since. By 1940 he and Mr. Walter Knott had met and Bob was able to do the thing he loved best. Knotts' Berry Farm was new and needed trees and shrubs and all the rest that makes it the landmark it is today. Bob and his crew of men are responsible for almost everything that grows there today. There are specimens of many unusual and interesting trees and shrubs and placing of each of them was a challenge with a beautiful reward. Bob was with Knotts until his retirement.

As a young man, Bob played on baseball teams on week-ends. He was a pitcher and loved baseball—always regretting that neither of his boys had his interest in the sport. He loved to fish and never failed to catch more than his share. As he grew older and could no longer attend sports activities, he remarked that television must have been invented just for his pleasure.

Bob died 7 January 1965, and, as it should be for him, he rests in Loma Vista Mausoleum in Fullerton, California with its beautifully landscaped grounds.

Florence Cornett worked for thirty years, 1940 to 1970, every day except Monday, from 1 p.m. to 9 p.m. in the Little Chapel at Knott's Berry Farm. Approximately, every four minutes, she touched a lever which caused doors to open revealing the full length picture of The Christ to those seated in the dark chapel. It is a painting of the Transfiguration by artist, Paul V. Kleben, and is considered one of the most authentic descriptions of Him.

Florence retired 1 January 1970 and continues to live in the house that she and Bob bought in Buena Park near their work, and converted into a beautiful home with a lovely landscaped yard and garden.

Billy Cornett, the elder son of Bob and Florence Cornett, enlisted in the Air Force in 1940. He married Mildred Heller 4 July 1941 in Nevada. She was born 12 September 1919 in Buffalo, N.Y., the daughter of Benjamin Heller and Isabelle Leavitt. They have two children; Billy Cornett II, born 13 December 1943 in San Francisco, California, and Cynthia Susan, born 13 March 1950 at Long Beach, California.

Billy Cornett made a career of the air force—he spent thirty years at it. His many experiences included leading the first squadron of 4F's to Alaska, non-stop; a two year assignment as military governor of a group of cities in Japan; a tour of duty in Panama; two tours of duty in the Pentagon, one of which was with the Joint Chiefs of Staff; two years as military NATO representative in Italy; and a tour of duty in Germany in 1968 during which he was stationed at Weisbaten, Germany. Billy Cornett was promoted to the rank of full Colonel in 1954 when he was thirty-five years old.

Colonel Billy Cornett retired in 1970 and moved to his ranch near San Francisco, Calif. to make a permanent home. His address is Hopland, California.

Billy Cornett II, born 13 December 1943 in San Francisco, the son of Mildred and Billy Cornett, Sr., married Carol Gilliland 4 July 1967. They have one child, Kristen Alexandria Cornett, born in May 1969.

Billy II and Carol both graduated from San Jose State College at San Jose, Calif. in 1967. Billy II majored in Political Science and Carol in Business Administration.

In order to fulfill his military obligation, Billy II went into Officers Training School immediately following graduation. He was promoted to the rank of Lieutenant JG and then to full Lieutenant which rank he now holds. He is undecided at the present whether to make the Navy his career or to go back to college and get a Master's Degree in Political Science in order to apply for duty in the Foreign Service of the State Department.

Billy Cornett II is presently at the United States Naval Destroyer School at Newport, R.I. His wife, Carol, and the baby, Kristen, have joined him.

Cynthia Susan, the daughter of Mildred and Billy Cornett Sr. graduated from high school in Weisbaden, Germany. She had an exceptionally high grade average and was accepted as a student at the University of California in Santa Cruz. While at the University she met and married Russell McCraken of Seattle, Washington. They have a son, Lachman McCraken, born 10 September 1970.

Cindy and Russell are presently in Canada, and are thinking seriously of making their permanent residence there. In any case, they plan to return to California for Russell to finish his fourth year at the University of California.

Mary Susan, the third child of Bob and Florence Cornett, graduated from Fullerton Union High School in 1940 and attended Fullerton College for two years then started working. Susan went to Panama to visit her brother, Billy, and his family in 1946, and there she met Jex Brigham. They were married 15 Sept. 1948 at Las Vegas, Nevada. He is the son of Thomas William Brigham and Eunice Moulded, and was born 11 January 1915 at Murphy, Texas.

Jex Moulden Brigham entered the Air Force in 1941 after receiving his Aeronautical Engineering degree from the Indiana Institute of Technology; thus fulfilling his boyhood dream of flying an airplane. During World War II, he did not go overseas but spent those years as an instructor in the United States. In 1950, Jex was sent to obtain his Master's Degree at Massachusetts Institute in Cambridge, Mass. Upon his graduation, they were sent to Florida where their first child was born.

Susan and Jex have two children: Desiree' Melinda, born 2 December 1953 at Elgin Air Force Base, Ft. Walton, Florida, and Thomas Robert, born 11 December 1956 at U. S. Naval Academy Hospital, Annapolis, Maryland. They were stationed in Washington, D.C. and living in Annapolis, Maryland.

Jex Brigham retired from the Air Force with the rank of Lt. Colonel. He is presently Management Engineer at Douglas Aircraft Company at Huntington Beach, California. The family lives in Santa Ana, California where their children are in school. Desiree' Melinda is a senior in high school and plans to go to the University of California. She worked the summer of 1970 as a typist in a CPA's office. Thomas Robert is a freshman in high school and his only interest is sports.

Tommy Kay Brigham, the daughter of Jex Brigham by a former marriage, graduated from Denton College at Denton, Texas. After teaching school for four years, Tommy married Michael A. Levin. He graduated from the University of Southern California as a Pharmacist and is presently attending law school. They have one child, Gregory Matthew, born 2 July 1970.

Robert Owen Cornett Jr., the fourth child of Bob and Florence Cornett, married Elizabeth Dale in September 1945

Texas. Elizabeth had a child by a previous marriage. Hildreth at Las Vegas, Nevada. She was born 12 April 1947 at Tyler, Texas. Robert and Elizabeth have two children; Susan Elizabeth, born 6 June 1950 at Tucson, Arizona, and Robert Owen III, born 8 December 1952 at Tucson.

Bob Jr. and Elizabeth were divorced in 1964. Among his various talents, Bob Jr. is a Master Chef and, since he finds it easy to find work wherever he happens to be, he is prone to travel from place to place following the seasons and his interests.

Hildreth married Troy Huskey and resides in Phoenix, Arizona. They have a son, Stephen Huskey age two.

Susan Elizabeth married Ronald Hedges in May 1969. They have a son, Robert Paul Hedges, born in April 1970. Ronald served three years with the navy and fulfilled his military obligation. Then he and Susan went back to the farm in Missouri.

Robert Owen Cornett III lived with his paternal grandparents and attended high school in Buena Park, Calif. When he joined his mother in Arizona, he became interested in the mechanics of purchasing, preparing and serving food in Hotels and restaurants. Since his father is a Chef, he had grown up in the business and, with training, study and actual working experience, he has become one of the youngest hotel and restaurant managers in the business. He is employed by the McCulloch Corporation, the company that bought London Bridge and moved it stone by stone to be rebuilt in Havasu City, Arizona. A note of interest here is that, when the Lord Mayor of London came to Havasu City to dedicate the bridge, Bob was in charge of the banquet which followed the ceremony. The McCulloch Corporation management was impressed with this young man and his ability so they moved him to Pueblo, Colorado where they placed him in charge of ninety people, including two chefs and eleven cooks. He is presently the General Manager of the Pueblo West Inn and the Eagles Nest Restaurant at the Pueblo Airport, Colorado. Bob lives with his mother when he is in Havasu City and, since she is now Elizabeth Schaffer, he also answers to the name of Schaffer because it seemed easier to use her name when he was growing up.

Chapter VIII

CHILDREN OF JOHN CORNETT II

JOHN CORNETT III

John Cornett III, the second son of Nancy and John Cornett Sr., born 3 May 1855, married Winnie Grigsby in 1883 at Dutton, Arkansas and settled on a mountain farm about three miles from his father's farm. They had six children; Rhoda, born 2 March 1884 and died 13 September 1885; Grover Cleveland, born 17 December 1885; George Washington, born 9 March 1888; James Grady, born 21 February 1891; Nancy Ann, born 20 November 1894; and Mary Ellen, born 3 March 1897.[1]

John Cornett III had built a one-room log house and planted an orchard soon after he filed on his claim. He had also built fences and cleared some small fields for crops. He proved up on the place and received his deed 26 March 1890.[2]

John and Winnie attended the Primitive Baptist Church and the boys went to the Madison County School at Dutton, Ark. In the winter, their father often walked four miles to work in the sawmill on White River for extra money to pay expenses.

The boys grew up in that beautiful country, went swimming in a favorite spot called the "Old Swimmin' Hole," and went fishing in summer and hunting in winter. They did the chores and worked hard on the farm. In later years, Grover told many stories of his happy, carefree boyhood days. One was about the time the S.L. & S.F. Railroad was built from Fayetteville through Dutton and Pettigrew in 1898. Grover and George were out hunting squirrels with their father's old musket loader. It was so heavy that it took both boys to carry it. As they walked along the track, they heard the train coming and started running down the mountain side. The engineer looked out the window and laughed. He pulled the whistle cord as they ran like scared rabbits until the train was out of sight. After he became a telegrapher for the Rock Island, Grover loved to tell this story to railroad men about the first time he saw a train.

The first day Grover (he was called Clevey then) went to school, one of the big boys was whipped with a long hickory limb. The frightened little boy wouldn't go back to school the next day. His mother took him by the hand and led him back. He was always afraid of that teacher. When Smith Miller, who later married his aunt Minerva, came to teach school at Dutton, everything changed for Clevey. Smith Miller was the tallest, handsomest man Clevey had ever seen, and the best teacher he ever had. This admiration continued to his last days. Uncle Smith, by the power of his strong personality, ruled the school with a firm hand, and the big boys stepped around respectfully.

The carefree boyhood ended abruptly on 18 August 1900 with the death of John Cornett III. Clevey was fourteen years old when his father died. And he became a man, the man of the family. That fall he had to take the initiative in the farm work. The usual number of hogs was butchered, the meat cured and smoked.

During the winter Winnie received letters from Thomas Williams, who had married John Cornett's sister Lauranie and moved to Texas a few years before. Lauranie had died 1 October 1900, and left him with five childrden near the ages of Winnie's five. Thomas asked her to marry him and help him to rear the children, who were cousins, as one family. Thomas made a trip back to Dutton and they were married 2 March 1901. They sold the cured meat in the smokehouse to Grandfather Cornett, who owned the general store in Dutton, for enough money to pay the carfare of the family to Texas. It was a marriage of convenience which turned out well. They lived together for forty-six years and reared a family of ten. Thomas and Winnie had one son, Mark Hanna Williams, born 28 February 1904. He died 9 September 1905.

The family became itinerant farmers in Texas. With teen-age children, who were willing to work, Thomas Williams had no trouble renting a farm. They would live on one farm a year, then he would decide to move to another place. They chopped cotton, they picked cotton, but during this time they seldom went to school. The weeks were one long, hard struggle for existence. The boys worked at making railroad ties or cutting stovewood; anything to make a few dollars to buy some food. Finally, Thomas Williams decided to move to Oklahoma.

The family of twelve started out in two covered wagons followed by their two milk cows. They would travel for a few days then, as their food supply began to get low, they would stop and work long enough to stock up on supplies.

The caravan happened into Dallas, Texas, at the time of the Texas State Fair, and they found themselves traveling through the city with the parade. People were ranged on either side of the street watching the parade. The onlookers thought they were part of the parade, clapping their hands and waving at the country family in the wagons. The young people enjoyed the exitement to the fullest, yelling and exchanging wisecracks with the crowd as they rode along. They were not allowed to turn off the main street until they came to the outskirts of Dallas.

At last they were out of the city and the boys could stretch their legs and run along beside the wagons as they headed on toward Oklahoma, crossing the Red River north of Denison, Texas.

Thinking that the children would be able to attend school there, Thomas Williams traded for a drug store in Calera, Oklahoma. But he soon found out that the books shown him by the owner had misled him. The money made in that drug store had to be made by selling whiskey. Since he wouldn't sell whiskey, Thomas had to close the store the next spring at a great loss. Then he rented land in Bryan County around Caddo for awhile, moving to another farm each year.

One by one, the boys left home as they reached their 21st birthdays. The father gave each one a team, harness and wagon as he left. Clevey was the last.

Bertha Williams married Lon Cook. He died shortly afterward and left her with a baby son, Teddy. Bertha returned home and lived with her parents until she married the second time.

There was a triple wedding at the Turnbull School House 21 March 1909; Bertha Cook married Tom Dillon, Cora Williams married Arville Hatcher and George Cornett married Etta Hatcher. They all settled on farms in the area.

Thomas Williams gave up farming and was appointed postmaster at Kenific, Oklahoma.

When Clevey's 21st birthday came and he was ready to leave, he had decided to go to the Telegraph College in Dallas, Texas. He sold his team and wagon to his stepfather for $200. That was to be paid half then and the balance as needed. Since he had never liked to be called "Clevey," he told his family that he had decided to be called by his first name, "Grover."

On 31 December 1906, Grover set out for Dallas on foot. As soon as he reached his destination, he paid his tuition, which was $69, and rented a room for one month. Then he was homesick. He managed to live on the remainder of the $200 by washing dishes for most of his meals until he had finished the course in telegraphy and the business course that went with it. Then the message came that Grover Cornett was to go to the railroad telegraph office where a dead head ticket was waiting for him. He was sent to Hinton, Okla. to be helper for the agent in the Rock Island station, at $25 per month. Since that wasn't enough for him to rent a room, he slept on a couple of grain doors laid across the rafters in the freight house. After a few months, Grover was sent to Driftwood, Oklahoma as Station Agent at $35 per month. He refused the job when he found they were intending to take the telegraph instruments out. The superintendent agreed to leave them for him to practice.

In the spring of 1909, Grover bid in the first trick telegraph operator's job at Alva, Oklahoma. While there, he met Essie Richardson, a young school teacher who was attending Northwestern State Teachers College. He went back to Driftwood after one year.

On 18 June 1911, Grover Cleveland Cornett and Essie Richardson were married in her parent's home on a farm at Homestead, Oklahoma.

Driftwood was a small town in northern Oklahoma with a railroad station, two stores, a post office, a bank, a school house and two churches. At that time it didn't have a house for rent or sale, not even an apartment.

Grover built a nice, little four-room house by hiring a good carpenter and doing much of the work himself. They lived in that house exactly five years. Their son, Richard Orin Cornett, was born in that house, 14 November 1913.

Grover bid in the station agent's job at Hitchcock, Oklahoma and they moved in June 1916. Two and-half years later, they moved to Elk City, Okla., the junction point between the Katy railroad and the Rock Island. During the war, the Katy station was closed and the Rock Island agent had the responsibility of both stations with a staff of 16.

The depression years brought hardships to the Cornett family and Grover helped his sisters and brothers as well as his parents. Essie returned to school. She attended high school in Elk City and graduated with the class of 1923. Then she taught first grade in the Elk City School for four years, at the same time commuting to night classes at Southwestern College at Weatherford, 56 miles away.

In 1927, Grover and Essie moved to Shawnee, Oklahoma where they lived for 25 years. Grover was station agent at Earlsboro, a small town in the oil field 12 miles from Shawnee, for six years. After the oil boom was over, he bid in the job as first trick telegraph operator at Shawnee. By going to summer school and to night classes while teaching in winter, Essie managed to earn a B.S. Degree in Education at Oklahoma Baptist University, which she received in 1937.

While Essie was taking night classes at O.B.U. Grover accompanied her and took several Bible courses.

Grover had worked for the Rock Island for 45 years when, after several heart attacks, he decided to retire in 1952. They sold the home and the kindergarten and moved to Nashville, Tennessee to live near their son, Richard Orin, and his family.

It wasn't long until Essie started another kindergarten in their home. She kept it, with Grover as assistant, until 1966 when they decided to retire again.

Grover continued to have heart attacks occasionally but still managed to be active in church. He was ordained as a deacon in the First Baptist Church of Elk City and was an active deacon in the First Baptist Church of Shawnee, and in Woodmont Baptist in Nashville, Tennessee. He always taught a Sunday School Class.

On 7 August 1968, Grover went out as usual to work a few minutes in his little garden. Essie found him ten minutes later sitting on a ledge, slumped over. He opened his eyes one time and breathed his last. He was buried in Mt. Olivet Cemetery in the beautiful Garden of the Gospel in Nashville, Tenn.

Essie sold their home in Nashville and moved to Laurel, Maryland to live with their son, Richard Orin, and his wife.

Richard Orin Cornett, son of Grover and Essie Cornett, was born in Driftwood, Oklahoma 14 November 1913; attended school in Elk City, Oklahoma; graduated from high school at Shawnee, Oklahoma in 1930, and received a Bachelor of Science degree in mathematics from Oklahoma

Baptist University in 1934. He taught physics at his Alma Mater for three years and attended graduate school at Oklahoma University, receiving his Master of Science Degree in 1937. He received his Doctor of Philosophy Degree in physics at the University of Texas in 1940 at Austin, Texas, and has since received honorary doctorates from three universities. He is listed in Who's Who in America, American Men of Science, and Who Knows and What.

Orin was head of the physics department at Oklahoma Baptist University for one year. When World War II came up, he obtained a leave of absence to go to Pennsylvania as Assistant Supervisor of Physics in the statewide ESMWT Program of Pennsylvania State University.

After one year Orin went to Cambridge, Mass. to teach electronics and radar to army and navy officers at Harvard University for the duration of the war.

While returning to his job in Pennsylvania after the Christmas holidays in 1941, Orin met Lorene Elizabeth Huston on the train. She was going from her home in Iowa to Pittsburgh, Penn. where she was teaching in an elementary school. It was a case of "love at first sight" for Orin and, after more than a year's courtship by correspondence, coupled with the few visits he could manage, he persuaded her to be his wife. They were married 26 May 1943 in the home where Lorene was reared, near Westboro, Missouri. Lorene was born 12 October 1916, the daughter of William Huston and Elizabeth Sloan. She attended Tarkio College at Tarkio, Mo., and graduated from Geneva College in Beaver Falls, Pennsylvania.

Orin and Lorene Cornett have three children: Linda Lorene, born 2 March 1944 at Needham, Mass.; Robert Huston, born 2 December 1945 at Shawnee, Okla.; and Stanley Orin, born 14 February 1949 at Shawnee, Oklahoma.

In September 1945, Orin returned to Shawnee, Oklahoma as Assistant to the President of Oklahoma Baptist University, later becoming Executive Vice-President of that institution. On 2 February 1951, he went to Nashville, Tenn. as Executive Secretary of the Education Commission of the Southern Baptist Convention. During the eight years he held that office, he surveyed most of the Baptist colleges and seminaries in the Convention and assisted in starting several more in major cities.

Orin left Nashville in 1959 to take a position with the United States Office of Education in Washington, D.C., advancing after three years to the rank of Assistant U.S. Commissioner of Education, as Director of the Division of Higher Education. While the family lived in McLean, Va.; Lorene returned to teaching. She taught second grade for several years in the Kent Garden Elementary School. The family were members of McLean Baptist Church, where both Orin and Lorene held various offices.

After six and one-half years with the U.S. Office of Education, Orin joined the faculty of Gallaudet College as Vice President, the position he holds at the present time. Gallaudet is the world's only college for the deaf. He has originated a new method of communication for the deaf which he calls "Cued Speech." This new method is being used in England, Australia, and other countries as well as in many schools in the United States. It is available in sixteen languages.

When the family moved to Laurel, Maryland in 1968 to shorten the commuting time to Gallaudet College, Lorene began teaching home-bound children for the Prince Georges County schools. They live at 8702 Royal Ridge Lane, Laurel, Md.

For data on above note the following quotation from "The Blue Book. Leaders of the English Speaking World," published by St. James Press, Chicago and London, 1970.

"Cornett, R(ichard) Orin, Ph.D., American, 55, Physicist and Educator: Vice President, Gallaudet College, Washington, D.C.; Divisional Director and Assistant Commissioner, U.S. Office of Education, Washington, D.C. (1962-65). Originator of Cued Speech (Communication for the Deaf) 1966."

Linda Cornett, the first child of Orin and Lorene Cornett, attended grade school at Nashville, Tennessee and entered McLean High School at McLean, Virginia during her freshman year. She sang with the Madrigal group in the high school choir. During her senior year, she played the part of Jane Gibson, and sang in the chorus, in the musical "Call Me Madam." She graduated in 1962.

During the four years Linda spent at Oklahoma Baptist University, she sang with the Bison Glee Club as one of the six "Little Sisters" for two years, and with the Chorale for two years. Linda was a mezzo-soprano soloist at the First Presbyterian Church through her junior and senior years. In the summer of 1964, she toured Europe with a group of O.B.U. students and teachers and spent 5 weeks studying English at Spurgeon College in England.

While a senior, Linda was selected for membership in Zeta Chi, an honorary leadership group whose members have demonstrated outstanding qualities of character and unusual ability as leaders. She was named to "Who's Who Among Students in American Universities and Colleges" for the 1965-66 school year. Linda graduated in 1966, and received a B.S. Degree in Education with a high school teaching certificate in English.

While at the University, Linda met William J. Badley. They were married 10 September 1966 in the McLean Baptist Church. Bill was born 4 March 1945 at Guthrie, Oklahoma, the son of William Alexander Badley and Dorothy Douglas.

Linda and Bill Badley moved to Iowa City, Iowa, and enrolled in the University of Iowa, where Bill received his A.B. degree in June 1967 and Linda her M.A. degree in August 1967. They then moved to Louisville, Kentucky where Bill enrolled in Southern Baptist Theological Seminary and works part-time as a night dispatcher. Bill worked all through his high school and college years on holidays and in the summers in railroad offices. Linda taught English in a predominately Negro high school in Louisville for three years. She has accepted a teaching assistantship at the University of Louisville and is presently working on her Ph.D. in English.

Robert Huston Cornett, second child of Orin and Lorene Cornett, graduated from McLean High School in 1963. He was a semi-finalist in the eighth National Merit Scholarship competition. During his junior year, he sang the tenor lead in the high school musical "Call Me Madam." Since then, he has studied with Frederick Wilkerson in Washington, D.C. and has been employed as a tenor in the choir of Christ's Episcopal Church in Georgetown (Washington, D.C.) for two years.

Robert entered Oberlin College, at Oberlin, Ohio as a pre-engineering student in 1963. In March and April of his freshman year, he toured the Soviet Union with the Oberlin Choir under the Cultural Presentation Program of the Department of State. The 75-member choir gave 33 concerts in Russian cities, including Leningrad and Moscow. They were well received everywhere. Upon their return, they gave a concert in Carnegie Hall, New York City. Each year after that, the choir made a nice educational tour in the United States. One tour took them all along the eastern coast of the United States, and still another to the Glacier area and to the many fine parks of our country.

Robert graduated from Oberlin College in 1967 with a B.S. degree in physics. He received a teaching assistantship at the University of Minnesota in Minneapolis, Minn. After a year of graduate study, he taught physics in Bowie High School, Bowie, Md., for two years, and continued his graduate work during the summers.

In September 1970, Robert accepted a teaching assistantship at the University of Maryland, in College Park, Md., and is presently continuing graduate study on a Doctor of Philosophy degree in astrophysics.

Stanley Orin Cornett, the third child of Orin and Lorene Cornett, graduated from McLean High School in June, 1966. He sang "The Star Spangled Banner" and "This is my Country" at his graduation. During high school, Stanley had leading parts in several musicals. Among them were "West Side Story," "Milk and Honey" and "Carnival." During his senior year in high school and the ensuing summers, he was employed as a tenor at St. John's Church, the "Church of the Presidents," across Lafayette Square from the White House.

Stanley entered the Eastman School of Music at Rochester, N.Y. in 1966. In addition, he appeared as tenor soloist in Haydn's "Creation," with the Corning Philharmonic Society, Corning, N.Y.

At the close of his junior year at Eastman, Stanley enlisted in the U.S. Army and took basic training at Fort Dix, New Jersey, beginning 1 June 1970. He auditioned for the United States Army Chorus and received a place as first tenor. He is presently stationed at Fort Myer, Virginia. Clophas and Lewis Smith live on a farm not far from Cane Hill in Northwest Arkansas. The main industry is raising chickens. It is not unusual for one farmer to have 100,000 chickens. Several hatcheries nearby afford work for many people in the community. It seems that most of the work in the area includes something to do with chickens. Raising fryers, processing the feed, canning and marketing all have a place in the progress of the community. Lewis B. Smith works for Campbell's Soup Company in a processing plant for chickens.

Northwest Arkansas is well known for its great orchards, especially the apple orchards. Nearly everyone in the vicinity of Cane Hills cans, freezes, and processes their own fruit, and the apples are marketed in many parts of the United States.

There are several good fishing places in the area of Cane Hill; Beav-a-rawa Lake and Lake Sequoyah. Other fine places are White River and Beaver Lake. Lewis Smith and his son, Richard, often go fishing and catch some big ones—weighing 30 or more pounds.

She was Dollie Minnie Neilson, the daughter of Paul Bernard Neilson and Aleda C. Yarpe, born 17 October 1898 at Tate, Nebraska.

Roy and Dollie farmed for three years and two daughters were born to them: Geraldine, born 14 December 1921 at Bookwalter, Nebraska, and Genevieve, born 24 November 1923 at Burchard, Nebraska. They held an auction sale and moved to Lincoln, Nebraska where Roy worked, first as a carpenter-helper, then as a tile-setter. Their third daughter, Imogene, was born at Lincoln 6 April 1926.

The job Roy landed installing freight and passenger elevators for Otis Elevator Co., meant moving from job to job which was hard on his family. In the spring of 1923, Roy left the Otis Elevator Co. to move to Ft. Collins, Colorado where he worked at various jobs until he became check clerk for the Union Pacific Railroad. Three sons were born to them in Ft. Collins; Roy Jr. born 9 December 1929, Loy Allen born 3 September 1931, and Donald Lee,

That winter they were ravished by a flood. In Challenge, California, the ninth and last child of Roy and Dollie Cornett, Janyce M., was born 7 March 1942.

For a time, Roy worked at fruit harvesting but, after the flood of 1937, he became interested in landscaping. He was successful at landscaping and planting and worked at that for 26 years. Then he was forced to retire because of ill health in 1963. He had a severe heart attack followed by a major operation for the removal of eight inches of his colon. Then, in October 1967 his condition was diagnosed "cancer." He died 7 October 1968, and was buried in Marin Memorial Gardens Nowata, California. Dollie continues to live alone in their home in Nowata with her children and grandchildren dropping in to see her often. She spends time with them in their homes and goes on trips with them.

Geraldine, the first daughter of Roy and Dollie Cornett, married Eugene Edward Ames 20 August 1938 at Maryville, California. He was born 25 October 1912 in Louisiana, the son of William E. Ames. They had three children: Joanne, born 7 May 1940; Eugene Edward, born 24 August 1941, both at Maryville, California; and Richard, born 28 January 1944 at Sacramento, California.

Edward Ames worked for many years as a mechanic for McClellan Air Field. They were both active, he in the Lion's Club and Geraldine in the corresponding woman's organization, the FeLion's Club. CHILDREN OF JOHN CORNETT II

LAURANIE CORNETT

Lauranie, the fifth child of Nancy and John Cornett II, was born at Hazard in Perry County, Kentucky on 2 October 1861, shortly before her father enlisted in the War Between the States. She was a small child when her parents moved to Arkansas and settled in Madison County.

Lauranie married Thomas Jefferson Williams 26 January 1881 at Dutton, Arkansas. He was born 5 February 1856 near Sneedville, Tenn., the son of William Riley and Leviny Williams. Their five children were born at St. Paul, Ark. in Madison County. They are: Arthur Lee, born 18 August 1882; Bertha, born 20 January 1886; Sherman, born 2 February 1888; Dewitt Clinton, born 17 December 1890; and Cora, born 11 December 1892. While the children were still small, they moved to Texas and settled on a farm near DeLeon, Texas where Lauranie died 7 October 1900.

On 2 March 1901, Thomas Jefferson Williams married Winnie Cornett, the widow of John Cornett III, in Madison County, Ark. She also had five young children. Thus, the ten cousins were united in one big family. Thomas J. and Winnie Williams had one son, Mark Hanna, born 28 February 1904. He contracted whooping cough and died 9 September 1905 at the age of 18 mos. (See the history of John Cornett Jr. in Chapter VII for further adventures of this family as they moved from place to place while the young people were growing up.)

After farming for several years in southern Oklahoma, T.

J. Williams was appointed Postmaster at Kenefic, Oklahoma in 1911. With the change in administration, the Democrats came into power in 1916, and T. J. lost his post office job. Then, they moved to Hitchcock, Oklahoma where T. J. worked as helper in the Rock Island Railroad Office for about four years. Winnie did sewing for the neighbors and earned some money that way. They moved to Okarche, Oklahoma where he started a shoe repair shop. After several years, he sold the shop and bought a shoe repair shop in Oklahoma City in order to be nearer his son, Clinton Williams. He built up a nice clientele and continued to repair shoes for many years. When he was a few years past eighty, he finally retired.

Thomas Jefferson Williams was ailing a long time and, in August 1947, he died. Winnie took care of her husband all through the years of his old age and, after he was gone, she felt so unneeded that her health began to fail. She lived only a little over a year longer, then she died 14 December 1948. They are both buried in Oklahoma City.

Arthur Lee, the first child of Lauranie and T. J. Williams, married Mary Lois Huff 17 December 1904 at Quitman, Texas. She was born 22 July 1879 at Sunfish, Ky., the daughter of James E. Huff and Elizabeth Durbin. They had three children: Grace Elizabeth, born 6 July 1905 at Calera, Okla. She died 29 December 1925. She had to spend a night in a hotel room in Dallas on her way back to college after the holidays, and her night clothes caught on fire. She died as a result of the burns; Raymond L., born 25 January 1908 at Kenific, Oklahoma; and Jewell Dean, born 19 July 1910 at Caddo, Oklahoma.

Arthur Lee Williams farmed in southern Oklahoma for eleven years. Then, in 1915 he moved to Texas to take a job in the Pipe Line Department, of what was then the Magnolia Petroleum Company. He worked at a pumping station on Harbor Island, a deep water port six miles across the bay from Aransas Pass. The company furnished Arthur with a boat so that he could go out any time a ship came in. Crude oil was shipped in by barge from Tampico, Mexico. He unloaded it into storage tanks, and later pumped it into railroad tank cars and shipped it out by rail to refineries in Texas. Magnolia sold its holdings there to Atlantic Pipe Line Company in 1920, and Arthur was transferred to the Marketing Department.

In his new job, Arthur was made a traveling coast man with headquarters in San Antonio, Texas. He stayed with that job until he retired in 1947, because of ill health. While they were in San Antonio, Lois developed a heart condition that kept her an invalid for many years. She died 12 January 1954 and was buried at Aransas Pass. Arthur and Jewell moved to Pleasanton, Texas where they make their home at the present time.

Raymond Lee, the second child of Lois and Arthur Lee Williams, started working for Magnolia Petroleum Co. in 1931 as Assistant Field Maintenance Mechanic. When Raymond's wife died, he gave his little daughter to Jewell and she reared the child as her own. Raymond and Wilburn still live in Austin, Texas.

Chapter XII

CHILDREN OF JOHN CORNETT II

ROBERT EDWARD LEE CORNETT

Robert E. Lee Cornett, the seventh child of John Cornett II and Nancy Combs, was born 23 August 1865 in Perry County, Ky. He moved with his parents to Dutton, Ark. in 1872. He filed on a homestead containing 160 acres about three miles from Dutton, where he built a log house and established his residence. Bob Cornett married Cordelia Odom 14 October 1893. Salona Cordelia Odom was the daughter of Basil Osborn Odom and Jemina Odom. They had ten children. With the exception of Kelly and Eunice, they were all born on the farm near Dutton. The ten are: Myrtle, born 14 September 1894; Boyd, born 19 February 1896; Bessie, born 18 January 1898; Kelly, born 15 March 1900; Eunice, born 13 December 1901; Flora, born 3 September 1903; Lloyd Harvey, born 22 September 1905; Lester Earl, born 7 November 1907, who died at the age of nineteen months, 7 July 1909; Esse, born 20 June 1910; and Jessie, born 27 January 1913.

Robert E. Lee helped his father in the General Merchandise Store at Dutton and, after his father's death in 1904, he and his brother, Elijah, were co-partners. Robert was postmaster and manager of the store for years. He sold the store to a nephew, Jesse Cornett, in 1917, and bought a general merchantile store at St. Paul, Ark., which he operated for seventeen years with the help of his son-in-law, Cleve Johnston.

After his retirement, Robert Cornett raised garden and kept up his small acreage near St. Paul. He had a fine orchard. He and Aunt Cordelia canned fruit and vegetables to use and to give to the neighbors.

Everyone remembers Uncle Bob as the kindest most cheerful man in the world. When we, his nephew, Grover Cornett and wife, visited him in St. Paul, after his children were married and away, he met us in the yard. "How are you, Uncle Bob?" asked Grover.

"Oh, I'm just gruntin' around," Uncle Bob answered cheerfully. "Your Aunt Cordie is so busy helping all our children get their babies, she hardly has time to take care of me any more." Then he took us inside to show us a cellar full of canned fruit and vegetables.

"What are you going to do with all this?" I asked.

"We always can a lot for our children and the neighbors," he answered. "We have a big garden and lots of fruit trees."

The last time we visited Uncle Bob was in August 1941. He was sitting under a tree in the yard churning with a hand dasher as we drove away. He waved to us with his usual smile.

Robert E. Lee Cornett died 1 March 1944 at St. Paul and was buried there in Brashear Cemetery. Aunt Cordie lived in St. Paul by herself for a few years, then moved to Fayetteville to be with her daughter, Bessie Cornett. She died 7 May 1963 and was buried at St. Paul.

"Uncle Bob," as he was affectionately called by his many friends, was loved by all who knew him. The following are some excerpts from a tribute written by Curtis R. Swain of Newport, Ark. and published in the Madison County Record at Huntsville, Arkansas, shortly after the death of our beloved Uncle Bob.

> "As far back as I can remember, I have known 'Uncle Bob' Cornett. During all the years I knew him, which were more than thirty, he did not change. The only thing that I noticed being different about Uncle Bob the last time I saw him was that he seemed tired. That was all.
> My first impression of 'Uncle Bob' was that he was unusually kind. The first time I walked into his store at Dutton, Ark. he got up out of his chair and said 'Honey, what do you want?' I hadn't gone into the store for anything. We lived close to his store and I had just walked off from the house unnoticed and wandered into the store. When he called me honey and asked me what I wanted, I felt that 'Uncle Bob' was a pretty good fellow and that made me bold enough, at the age of four, to ask my first favor of Uncle Bob and I said, 'Will you give me some candy?' He supplied the candy and, although my parents didn't know it, I wandered into 'Uncle Bob's' store daily until I got so big that I was ashamed, and never once did I fail to get the candy.

" 'Uncle Bob' sold the Chicago Blade and Ledger, or rather kept a supply of them for a few of the folk who would come in and get them when they came to the post office which was in the store. One day I asked him to let me sell the Blade and Ledger. He did, and then he helped me make out the reports and showed me how much profit I had made. That was my first job.

After 'Uncle Bob' left Dutton and moved to St. Paul, I didn't see him often. I graduated from school and decided to teach. He went to a lot of trouble to help me get my license straightened out and to get a school. . . .

'Uncle Bob' was one of the few men I have known that never harmed anyone; never misled or misinformed a living soul; never asked a favor for himself, and never refused one to others that was in his power to grant. Morally, he was as perfect as any man I ever knew.

Words are empty, I know, and I never did know what to say to anyone bereaved, but 'Uncle Bob's' family has my deepest sympathy in having suffered so great a loss.

CURTIS R. SWAIM.

Chapter XIV

CHILDREN OF JOHN CORNETT II

EMMA CORNETT

Emma Cornett, the tenth child of Nancy and John Cornett II was born 12 May 1887 on her parent's farm near Dutton, Ark. When her father died in 1904, she and her mother moved to a small house in Dutton where they lived for several years. Her daughter, Uvalda, was born there 23 March 1905.

Nancy Cornett began to lose her sight. Her eyes dimmed more and more, until finally, her sight was completely gone. Emma took care of her aged mother as long as she lived.

Emma grew a wonderful garden every year, two full crops each year on her large lot in town. She also had several good fruit trees which furnished plenty of fruit in season.

After her mother's death in 1920, Emma and Uvalda went to Oklahoma to visit her older sister, Adaline Kirby, at Eufaula. They stayed in Oklahoma for a few years living first in Eufaula and then in Tulsa, Oklahoma.

Uvalda married Walter Russell 10 December 1924 in Webb City, Mo. He was born in 1897 in Webb City, Mo., the son of W. R. Russell and Ona Hutchens.

Walter, Uvalda and Emma moved to Huntsville, Ark., living in a small house back of Smith Miller for a few years. Then they moved out to one of Uncle Smith's farms where they lived until they moved to California in 1947.

Walter and Uvalda Russell both worked at the Knotts Berry Farm at Buena Park, California. Walter died 29 November 1950. Emma died 9 July 1955. They are both buried in Loma Vista Memorial Park in Fullerton, California.

Uvalda Russell continued to work at Knotts and lived by herself. After her mother died, she was very lonely, but she had some relatives who also worked at the Farm, and they dropped in now and then.

Uvalda Russell married Francis Bunn Misner 9 March 1957 in Joplin, Missouri. He was born 19 November 1907 at Prosperity, Mo., the son of John Misner and Mary Smith. They moved to Sarcoxie, Mo. where Francis Bunn Misner was able to work for several years. Then his health failed and it became necessary for him to retire. He died 8 August 1968 and was buried in the Sarcoxie Cemetery.

Uvalda continues to live in Sarcoxie, Mo. She had a stroke a few years ago which left her in very poor health. But she is still able to live alone and take care of her home. A stepdaughter, who lives near, comes in to see her often.
